

'Vivian Ibrahim writes about the Copts of Egypt with clarity. Her book provides a welcome and eloquent insight into the complexity and controversial dynamics of Egyptian inter-communal relations.'

– H.E. Dr Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Former Secretary-General of the United Nations (1992-1997)

THE COPTS OF EGYPT

The Challenges of Modernisation and Identity

Vivian Ibrahim

The Coptic Christians of Egypt have traditionally been portrayed as a 'beleaguered minority'. This book uses newly discovered Coptic archival sources to present a vivid and alternative image of the community, examining Coptic agency in the twentieth century. Vivian Ibrahim reveals a strong Coptic response to the emergence and threats of Political Islam from the 1940s, and examines how Copts negotiated a role for themselves during the colonial period and in Nasser's post-revolutionary Egypt. Dismissing the monolithic portrayal of the community, she highlights the varied Coptic factions and groups that contributed to the identity of the Coptic community in the first half of the twentieth century.

'This book represents a major departure in the current historiography of modern Egyptian history and is a very significant contribution to the field.' – Roberto Mazza, Assistant Professor of History, Western Illinois University

'An important and timely book which challenges the standard portrayal of identity politics in the modern history of Egypt and of the Arab Middle East... This book is community history at its best, an essential critical read for those interested in Egyptian nation and state building as well as in the history of Middle Eastern Christians.'

– Nelida Fuccaro, Reader in the Modern History of the Arab Middle East, SOAS, University of London

Vivian Ibrahim is a Post-Doctoral Researcher examining European-Muslim identities at University College Cork, Ireland. She holds a PhD from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London, where she was also a Teaching Fellow in Middle Eastern History.
